

You do not have to take a test to be findable

Searches of consumer genealogy databases for a person of European descent in the United States. That population is what the study measured, and stating the figure for everybody makes it wrong.

about 6 in 10

searches already return a third cousin or closer, which is close enough to identify somebody who never took a test in their life

Source: Erlich, Shor, Pe'er and Carmi, Science 362(6415), November 2018. LaMarr Labs, lamarrlabs.com/resources